

Report on Celebration of International Tribal Day

On August, 9th 2023 International Tribal Day was celebrated by the Department of English. To glorify this occasion, students of M.A. semester III were given to write projects on the topic Depiction of Tribal Culture in World Literature. Through their papers, the students emphasized on how the identity of tribal communities is rooted in the tribal culture. Its uniqueness lies in the unbreakable bond between the community and nature. Covering major authors in their papers they presented how it is important for tribes to protect and preserve their culture in the present times as they are also the part of social evolution. Students depicted in their papers how development of literature and of different art forms in tribal communities predated the emergence of literature and arts in the so called mainstream society. Their projects and papers were appreciated by the faculty of the Department. The students participated enthusiastically and brought forth new ideas with a variety of topics on various authors known for their contribution in tribal literature.
