the lecture was to provide a deep understanding of the 'Post Colonial Theory' and its wider perspectives to study social, cultural and psychological impact after Colonialism.

Dr Abide began his discourse defining the terms 'Post Colonialism' and 'Colonialism'. He said that Post Colonialism is a basically a discourse of the marginalized, the wretched of the Earth (Franz Fanon), pilferation, power politics, linguistic dominance, hegemony, subjugation, feminist criticism. He described in detail the relation between the Colonizer and the Colonized which is mutual and unidirectional. He encapsulated Edward Said's 'Orientalism', Homi K. Bhabha's 'The Location of Culture' and 'The Other' Question's four keys - Mimicry, Hybridity, Ambiguity and Fixity, quoting various examples from the literary texts. The description of his self created formulas $T3 + PS + SE + CB + CC + HG$ really mesmerized and enchanted the listeners as he explained them. Signs: T3 - describes the whites as Traders, Translators and Thief with the history of white man's burden. He quoted the Caliban Complex, Prospero Syndrome. He said that 'The Tempest' is an allegory of Post Colonialist.

perspectives/discourse where the hierarchy has been dismantled. Prospero's claim that in exchange of the island he has given Caliban the gift of language is chosen as the prototype of the order and Caliban's response - 'Is, I know how to curse'.

Dr. Abidhi also stressed on how theories/theory is being dominated by foreign names - Foucault, Lacan, Said, Gayatri Spivak, etc. K. Bhabha and many more. Indian intellectuals do not then, they enjoy the fruits of modernity and then start theorizing. Towards the end of his discourse he said that the present time is to talk about fourth (IVth) World Literature, the subalterns, dalits, marginalized sections, gender parity, tribal ecological issues, how to restore and conserve, resist, and assert which leads to self-realization - Decolonization. The process began long ago no doubt.

He also answered a few questions asked in the Questionnaire session - by the participants. The event ended with a note of gratitude extended by Dr. Tarlochan Kaur Sandhu. More than 90 participants had joined the event. Outcome: The students and participants became familiar to post colonial theory, terms like Colonialism, decolonization, hegemony, the response was highly appreciated.
